Message from Chair of Judges

In my first year as Chairman of Judges, I would like to present the complete catalogue of results. A set of results that the entire judging panel should take pride in. In the only wine show in Australia that requires qualification via other awards, some of the top wines seen during the show season, have stamped their authority once more.

This year, our team of judges tasted their way through 1,247 entries, a lift of 6.5% in entries from 2017, with 56 new exhibitors included in a total of 224 exhibitors. The big number of new exhibitor numbers is particularly pleasing. This points to a healthy belief in the quality of the show from our constituency.

This year, the major awards were shared by 15 different producers across 11 different regions.

The major awards, as always, are just a small snapshot of the reality of what happened during judging. I cannot recall a show that I have been involved in, where the final judging was so close between many different entries. The exhibitors who missed out on major awards should take heart from the scores they received when they read through the full list of results, as it was a close run thing. The breadth and depth of classes are a true indication of Australian winemaking skill.

As usual, the experienced judging panel was comprised of a mix of winemakers, vignerons, sommeliers, purchasing managers and distributors, bringing together many of the key industry stakeholders. Across the entire judging panel, every state and territory was represented with the exception of the Northern Territory.

Highlights

Whites

Riesling – dominated by the younger vintages at the trophy taste off, particularly 2017. Although some of the older vintages where starting to show their age, Riesling rose to the top in taking out the White wine of Provenance award this year.

Semillon – typically strong, with a very high strike rate of medals, in a relatively small class. The mature wines dominated the current vintage, with vintages 2013 and 2014 in a purple patch.

Chardonnay – very strong across vintages 2017 and 2016 with no less than 7 different regions receiving gold medals. In the end it was a very tight tussle between the Yarra Valley, Margaret River and the Adelaide Hills for the top award, with the Adelaide Hills prevailing. The top chardonnay completed the trifecta by taking out the best white wine of the show plus the Len Evans Memorial Trophy for the Best wine of show. An outstanding exhibit.

Reds

Pinot Noir – The outstanding 2017 vintage lead to some of the hottest judging in the show with the Mornington, Tasmania and the Yarra Valley dominating proceedings with 6 gold medals. While the regional styles may have been disparate, the quality was uniformly outstanding.

The emerging reds and blends were a real surprise packet this year with a very exciting trophy taste off between two Grenaches, Malbec, Montepulciano, Nero d'Avola, Sangiovese and a Tempranillo. Brilliant, and a testament to the effort exhibitors are putting in to find varieties that really suit their growing conditions. The resurgence of grenache would also seem complete in taking the varietal trophy, plus a grenache blend, with shiraz and Mataro, taking out the blended wine trophy.

Shiraz – easily the biggest classes in the show with 284 entries receiving 20 gold medals, spread across 10 different regions, and offering a very diverse range of styles. It is easy to see the mastery that this country has with this variety in this forum. In a surprise, the trophy winning wine this year is from Geelong. A first I believe.

Cabernet Sauvignon – has a stellar show with 5 regions sharing gold medals, and turning in a higher strike rate than shiraz, with 8.6% gold. In the end Margaret River dominated in the trophy taste off (again!), with the same producer of the varietal trophy leading by example and backing up with the Red Wine of Provenance trophy.

On behalf of the RNCAS, the wine show committee and the judging team, I would like to thank all the exhibitors for supporting the National Wine Show of Australia, and trust that you will continue to support the show in the future.
